Local Fans Would Much Rather See Dillon Box Moran Than Gibbons.

Copyright, 1916, by The Press Publishing Co. HERE'S a little talk about matching Jack Dillon and Mike Gibbons. This might be a good one out in St. Paul. We'd prefer, around here, to see Dillon fight Moran, Weinert, Fulton, Coffey or

Can any one imagine Kid Lewis wing Dillon a fight? Well, Lewis gave Mike a fight. Mike was unduly ind to Lewis, perhaps, when he had the Englishman floundering all over the ring and practically whipped in the fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh rounds. Without a doubt Mike pulled his punches then. But when Lewis cut loose in the last round and poked Mike on the mouth it looked as if Mike was trying for a couple of minutes. At any rate, Mike landed a number of punches on Lewis It is utes. At any rate, Mike landed a number of punches on Lewis. It is rather difficult to imagine Dillon landing as often, even while trying to hold back his punch, without stow-

to hold back his punch, without stowing the Britisher away.

Mike's latest performance in New York was a clever but otherwise unsatisfactory boxing exhibition with Eld Lewis, who was ten pounds lighter than Mike.

One of Dillon's latest was his fight with Big Tom Cowler, who was half a foot taller and outweighed Dillon about fifty pounds. Dillon knocked Cowler out so hard that the big Englishman hasn't come back to the ring the popular match. Perhaps big Frank is playing a fory same, waiting for the papers to boost the match and knock him for not fighting until the public sets all worked up. But more likely Moran feetan't want any of Dillon's game.

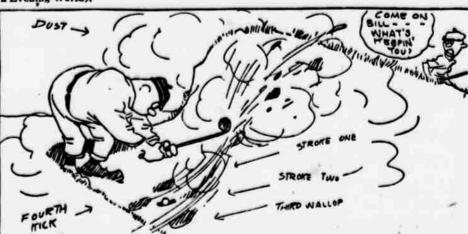

Moran has fought Willard. What a flop it would be to be knocked out by little Dillon' It would just about put Frank into the discard. It would be like the defeat of Joe Choynski, pears ago, by little Walcott, that nearly ended Joe's fighting career, because it made people regard Joe as comething of a joke in spite of his spiendid record.

LITTLE has been heard from Jess Willard since he started out with the circus. Jess is matched with Fulton to fight in the fall. He can so along getting a little extra work during his circus exhibitions. Willard's arms were much larger when he came here to fight Moran than they were in Havana. Jess said that he had developed them by boxing constantly for several months with the Will West show.

DAILY REVIEW OF BIG LEAGUE PENNANT RACES Yanks Doing Better Than Fans Expected, Being Third After Meeting Every Club

It's a fact that boxing constantly develops the arms more than any other exercise except wreatiling. All veteran boxers have unusually well developed left arms—if they stand with the left arm and the left foot advanced. This is because in boxing nearly all of the work is done with the left arm, while the right is held back to block with and used only occasionally, when opportunity offers for the landing of a heavy blow. The left arm is feinting or hooking or jabbing nearly all the time. It does a lot of work and is developed in proportion.

Browns was not a demonstration of the national pastime as she should be played in the greatest city. It was baseball, though, and because the breaks of the game went against the pretenders is no reason why the club should be put on the dissecting table to what's the matter. There was nothing the matter except that Roger Peckinpaugh, the most de-pendable infielder in the loague, made a couple of errors that let in runs, and that Ray Keating was kicked in the shins the mo-ment he risked putting the ball over the plate. Things simply broke wrong. The Yanks hit well enough to win a couple of ball games, but, as luck would have it, the fielding went wrong.

Don't worry about the Yanks.
